Pink Ladies bare their soles

Grease-themed punters took part in a grape tread on Saturday to raise money to help the fight against breast cancer. Drinkers at the North Star pub, Chessington, were fundraising for Against Breast Cancer and enjoyed a raffle, stalls and disco on the night. Ember Inns has supported the charity since 2006 and the company is currently trying to raise £50,000 from its range of "pink" drinks, which include Lady Penelope, Lily the Pink and Tickled Pink.

'Incest' was kept secret for almost 30 years, court hears

by LOUISE ROBERTSON

lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

An 80-year-old man charged with two counts of buggery and three counts of indecent assault against his son appeared at Kingston Crown Court on Monday.

The offences, which the accused denies, allegedly happened at their family home in Kingston between November 1, 1979, and June 1981.

The man making the allegation, who cannot be identified for legal reasons, sent his father birthday cards every year until 2007 because he was scared of arousing suspicion, the court has heard.

Defence lawyer Roy Brown handed birthday and Father's Day cards to the jury and challenged the alleged victim, who signed with kisses and smiley faces.

He replied: "You do what you need to do to get by and not raise suspicion. My mum is very important to me, always has been, so I didn't want to inflict or encourage any conflict that have led to me having a conversation where I revealed what had happened."

He told the court he vividly remembered being sexually abused by his father and said it made him "resent" and "despise" him throughout his adult life.

He told the court: "It's not something I've dreamed up or made up for any reason or any kind of gain. I still see it to this day."

Mr Brown put it to him that it did not happen, which he adamantly denied. He said: "You feel guilty, ashamed, you wonder if people will believe you, but the guilt and the shame drives the silence."

"I didn't think I truly realised it for a few years because I think, at 16, I was still in a semi-state of denial that it had happened."

He told the court he only broke silence when his wife sent his father a card in April 2008 and signed his name against his wishes.

He had previously broken all contact with him following an argument in October 2007 where he ended up "toe-to-toe" with his father, the court heard.

His wife told prosecution lawyer Kathryn Hirst it was quite a "scary fight" between the men and got out of hand quickly.

She then claimed he revealed the abuse and on June 1, 2008, both told his mother, who confronted his father later that day, the court heard.

The defendant, who cannot be identified for legal reasons, said: "I did no such thing," the alleged victim's wife claimed.

She added: "It got very surreal at that point. He [the father] said 'you know what you were like at that age'."

"I think he said 'with your porn mags' or something."

Detective Sergeant Martin Jones read to the court excerpts from the police interview with the father.

During the interview, the father said: "How would a boy of that age know about all these things? That's why I don't understand where he got it from."

He denied all the abuse but said he woke up one night and his son was lying on top of him. The defendant said the behaviour was so strange he would remember it forever. When asked if, as the father of a small boy, it should have been dealt with immediately, he said probably, but he had no idea how.

The father was due to take the stand on Tuesday.

The trial continues.

'Don't drink and drown'

by LOUISE ROBERTSON

lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

Beer mats highlighting the danger of drinking and swim- ming have been endorsed by a pub manager.

The beer mats, provided by Kingston Council, have been placed in 13 premises along the river with the message "Don't drink and drown".

Oliver McClorey, manager of the Ram, said the mats had generated a lot of comment from punters who had not re- alised the danger of the river.

He said: "I've seen plenty of people jump in the river and a couple of girls being taken out when they've got into trouble."

"I think for some of the stu- dents it might bring it home that it is dangerous."

"Seeing it in the pub can't do any harm and anything that brings it to people's attention has to be a good thing."

The council has provided the £2,000 funding to distribute about 10,000 beer mats and posters around premises and sent out the first batch of mats a couple of weeks ago.

The drive is part of the River- side Safety Project, which also saw the recent installation of railings near Kingston Bridge to stop people jumping in.

A council spokesman said: "This is a very important and potentially life-saving aware- ness campaign aimed at young adult males."

"It is essential the council works with partners such as the police and Pubwatch to keep driving home the mes- sage the river is a dangerous place that must be treated with respect. We hope this will pre- vent innocent mistakes turn- ing into personal tragedies."

A boater dragged two men out of the river on Sunday, April 5, after they began to drown during a race across the river.

Two PCSOs had saved a drowning 13-year-old girl two days earlier, close to Kingston Bridge.

Soap star's fete is revealed

Nasty, but nice: Actor John Altman proved a big hit

Deadlinepix KT26494

Visitors saw a softer side to EastEnders' Nasty Nick on Saturday, when the actor opened All Saints Church's summer fete.

John Altman opened the fete at 11am and posed for pictures with Reverend Jonathan Wilkes before signing fans' autographs.

Rev Wilkes said: "He was fantastic. He brought some pictures and handed them out."

"Having someone in the public eye support us is great. It gives us the publicity we need for our main aim, which is to redevelop the church for the people of Kingston."

The church hopes the fete will have raised about £1,500 for Ask, which wants to see a major refurbishment of the historical church.

Visitors enjoyed games, face painting, a bouncy cas- tle, manicures and even prize-winning sausages.

NHS to pay off debt before 'economic tsunami'

An "economic tsunami" will hit the NHS in Kingston in two years, with funding cuts likely, it has been warned.

The Department for Health is telling NHS bodies there will be zero or negative growth by the 2010-11 financial year.

NHS Kingston said the gloomy forecast vindicated its past financial decisions, in- cluding cuts to help pay off a £22m debt.

But it is also pushing ahead with more changes, including outsourcing its community nurses to a private not-for-pro- fit company Your Healthcare, due to go live in October.

David Smith, chief executive of NHS Kingston, said: "We have got less than two years be- fore what people are calling the economic tsunami arrives. "If we don't do it in that time it will get very difficult."

NHS Kingston will have paid off its £22m debt by the end of this financial year, benefiting from an annual boost of about £6.5m.

Paying off the debt was "absolutely the right strate- gy", Mr Smith said.

Funding for 'irregular' school

A Tamil school being investigated for financial and governance irregulari- ties, after complaints it mishandled taxpayers' money, has been given more funding by Kingston Council.

When the investigation began into the Institute of Tamil Culture (ITC), which runs teaches Tamil at Tolworth Girls School, the council said this year's payment of £12,989 would be withheld.

But another £1,000 has since been handed over to help keep it solvent.

A Kingston Council spokesman said: "It was agreed back in March/April that to avoid the organisation facing any cashflow difficulties while the in- vestigation was ongoing that it would receive 1/12 of the grant (approximate- ly £1,000) in April. This was paid.

"The investigation is close to comple- tion and being reported."

The ITC is co-operating with the in- vestigation by the Audit Commission which is looking into the accounts and financial governance arrangements.

The £12,989 was part of a three-year grant to the ITC.

Security 'let my son wander off'

by LOUISE ROBERTSON

lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

A concerned mother has criticised lax security at Chessington World of Adventures after her four-year-old son was allegedly allowed to wander out of the park gates unattended.

Janet Williams, who was at the park on May 29, said she panicked when she noticed son James had disappeared.

The mother-of-two had stopped to buy a backpack for him at a kiosk close to the exit but, when she turned around, he had gone.

The Wallington resident said: "I was screaming for him everywhere. The first couple of minutes when a child goes missing are very important so I was in a bit of a state."

A member of staff said he thought the boy had gone to the toilet but a few minutes later she heard her son's cries.

He had managed to walk through security and into the car park, where a woman found him. She said: "Thank God a responsible female found him. He could've been picked up by anyone. He was crying his eyes out and I was in a frantic state."

"The security on the entrance is fantastic but it needs to be looked at on the exit."

"I'm very concerned about it. He was only gone about four minutes but that's not the point. A four-year-old child was allowed to walk out of the park by himself."

A spokesman for Chessington said the only possible explanation was he walked out with a crowd, although Mrs Williams insisted it was quiet when they left at about 4pm.

A spokesman said: "We do question children when they walk out of the park. I've witnessed it myself and that's how staff are trained. I know lone children are questioned but we can't question every person that walks out the gate.

"As soon as a child is reported missing, staff will implement our well-rehearsed procedures to reunite the child with the family as quickly as possible. In this particular case the child was not reported missing."

The incident happened just two days after glamour model Katie Price visited the park with her children Harvey and Princess Tiaamii.

Security came under fire then for a very different reason - staff were reportedly "aggressive" in providing personal protection for the model.

Mrs Williams said: "I accept it was half term and it's a busier time for them but they should treat this as a learning curve."

Heralding coronation garden

A spectacular historic garden marking the 500th anniversary of King Henry VIII's coronation opens this month at Hampton Court Palace.

The Chapel Court Tudor Garden is inspired by the king's 16th century privy gardens and will include distinctive features such as heraldic beasts.

Conservation charity, Historic Royal Palaces, will also celebrate with a Tudor river pageant travelling from the Tower of London to Hampton Court on June 20.

Designer of the garden, Todd Longstaffe-Gowan said: "This unique evocation of a Tudor royal garden within Henry VIII's great 16th century palace at Hampton Court is the result of new and extensive research into royal privy gardens of the time.

"The garden is a distinctive tribute to the king in his 500th anniversary year, planted with flowers and herbs."

Mr Longstaffe-Gowan, who is an acclaimed landscape architect, is in collaboration with James Fox and the gardens and estates team.

The garden will include specially commissioned "Kyns beestes" inspired by those in the painting the Family of Henry VIII (1545), which hangs in the palace.

Record attempt let-down

Kingston school pupils who were seeking notoriety with Guinness World Records have been refused their title.

The Big Foot challenge at Tolworth Girls' School last July involved 5,409 individual foot prints being assembled into one large foot print and would have been the first record of its kind.

Organisers spent months compiling a video and photographs to send off as proof and MP Edward Davey officiated on the day.

But Guinness World Record bosses refused to honour the title as they said there were too many gaps between footprints and they were not attached.

The event raised money for Kingston-based charity the Landirani Trust, which helps orphans in Malawi and involved pupils from 21 schools in the borough.

Heather Palmer, chairman of the Landirani Trust, said they were "really upset" about the rejection.

The charity plans to repeat the challenge with Tolworth Girls' School next year, but with the footprints in a line, which would be easier.

This year's joint fundraising event will be a recycled fashion show on July 3.

Surbiton stays Tory in Euros as Boris lends his support

A whirlwind visit from Boris Johnson to Surbiton last week was enough to secure Syed Kamall's seat for the Conservative Party in the European elections.

Mr Kamall, who lives in Berrylands, was re-elected under the proportional representation list system.

Marina Yannakoudakis, a new candidate, replaced John Bowis from New Malden, who stood down.

In London, the Conservative Party managed to keep their three MEPs with 479,037 votes. After polling 372,590 votes, Labour won two seats, a loss of one, with the Lib Dems coming third with 240,156 votes. They won one seat, along with the Green Party and UK Independence Party (UKIP).

No BNP candidates were elected in London.

Helen Whately, Conservative parliamentary candidate for Kingston and Surbiton, said: "We can be proud our area is putting good people into the European parliament."

Nationally, Labour suffered its worst election results since the Second World War, coming in third after UKIP, but in London the party suffered only a 4 per cent fall in votes.

Charity shop raided by latex-glove thieves

by DAVID LINDSELL

dlindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

Burglars smashed their way into a large charity shop in Tolworth last week and may have put on latex rubber gloves they found inside to steal a safe and smash open a till.

The Fircroft Trust shop in Ewell Road was raided through the garage doors at the back of the warehouse on Thursday, June 4.

Police have already told managers Elaine Cook and Evelyn Wallace-Barton they have not found any fingerprints.

Kay Harris, chief executive of Fircroft Trust, said: "It is not a massive amount of goods they have taken, but how could you break in to a charity shop? It's incredible."

"Fortunately there wasn't a huge amount of money in the safe, less than £100, but they have taken a set of keys so we are going to have to change the locks."

She said passing trade had been lost as a result of the shop being shut for a day and repairing the doors would cost money.

Co-manager Elaine Cook, who has worked at the store for 19 years, said: "They are just unbelievable."

Disbelief: Elaine Cook and Evelyn Wallace-Barton survey the damage done by thieves

The charity shop is more of a warehouse of bric-a-brac, with traditional charity shop fare such as old videos and paperback books surrounded by curios and cheap second-hand furniture.

Two years ago, a set of antique furniture linked to the last Tsar of Russia was spotted in the shop.

Volunteer nominated

The man with the plan in Kingston, should something go horribly wrong, has been nominated for a Safer London volunteer award.

Retired project manager Douglas Craik has been running the Incident Support Team (IST) in Kingston for six years and will help the council if there is a major incident such as a flood, fire or bomb scare.

It is believed to be the only post of its kind in London, and Mr Craik has plans in place for emergency rest centres across the borough that accommodate 300 people at a time.

Although his services have not yet been needed, Mr Craik and more than 100 volunteers have regular training so they are prepared.

It is the first year of the Safer London Foundation Volunteer Awards and Mr Craik is up against 19 other finalists for the £1,000 prize.

Lock gates plea after muggings

Dangerous park: Calls have been made to keep the gates locked

Deadlinepix KT26597

Five people were mugged in a Surbiton park in one week, leading to an increase in police patrols and renewed calls for the gates to be locked.

Detectives believe the same two teenagers are behind all of the crimes, because the same tactics and phrases were used each time.

Three of the muggings happened late at night as the victims used Victoria Recreation Ground as a cut through between Surbiton and Long Ditton.

Two other young professionals were robbed on their way to work as the pair of them headed towards Surbiton station.

Wallets, cash and mobile phones were among the items taken and, although no one was seriously hurt, police said there was a "level of violence used".

The last reported mugging happened on bank holiday Monday, May 25, and since uniformed and plain clothes officers have increased their presence, the crimes have stopped.

The muggers are believed to be white teenagers aged be-

by KERRY GROVES

kgroves@london.newsquest.co.uk

tween 16 and 20, wearing hoodies and riding mountain bikes.

Olive Phippen, of Victoria Avenue, said: "It surprises me that some people still go across that park in the middle of the night, even women alone do it."

"It's a big park and there's no lighting in there at all."

"It's just asking for a crime to happen."

In February, a 19-year-old man was threatened with a knife and attacked as he walked through the park at midnight.

Councillor Liz Green said the prospect of locking the parks could be investigated again, but there are many "unresolved issues" from the last time it was discussed.

Anyone with information related to the muggings is asked to call DS Skinner on 020 8247 4946 or call Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555111.

Hospital trust status target by 2010

Plans to turn Kingston Hospital into an NHS Foundation Trust are pressing ahead, despite ongoing financial pressures.

The hospital board last week agreed a timetable to apply to become an NHS Foundation Trust, with the aim of achieving Foundation Trust status in 2010.

Earlier attempts to achieve Foundation Trust status, which would give the hospital more freedom to make decisions, have faltered.

A hospital spokesman said: "We believe that we are now in a very strong position to continue with our application and work to do this will start immediately."

A 12-week formal public consultation with patients, the public and staff will be held later this year.

'Cash in the attic' aims to help charity

Two Tolworth siblings raided their grandparents' attic recently to raise money for Help the Heroes.

Abigail Foster, eight, and her sister Elana, seven, joined forces with their 11-year-old friend Alexander Mintz over the half-term holidays to set up a stall for the charity.

The sisters were inspired by their father, who is a captain in the Army.

Grandmother June Foster said: "They decided the night before to set up the stall and did it all off their own backs."

"In my husband's line of work he has to deal with a lot of maimed and injured soldiers so they are quite aware of what's going on."

"Within two hours they'd taken about £60 - mostly from people stopping to donate."

Their mother also served as a major in the Army, so the cause is something close to the children's hearts.

Underage alcohol sales warning for shopkeeper

A Tolworth shopkeeper has been allowed to continue selling alcohol, despite being caught selling to underage test purchasers twice.

Shilpa Patel, of BSMA News, in Ewell Road, sold four cans of lager to an undercover test purchaser on March 10 this year.

It was the second time she had fallen foul of the trading standards sting, having served WKD Irn Bru to a youth in 2005.

She was given a 12-month conditional discharge at Kingston Magistrates' Court.

Trading standards had received two complaints about her selling alcohol to under 18s and police intelligence revealed it was where many youths were served.

Deciding whether to let her continue selling alcohol, councillors decided at a licensing committee meeting on Friday, May 29, to tighten up the conditions on her licence.

She will now have to have CCTV installed, ask all under 25-year-olds for photo ID, keep a log of all alcohol refusals and take part in the police's bottle marking scheme.

Councillor Ian Reid said if she broke the conditions, her licence was likely to be revoked or suspended in the future.

NATURAL FASHION: Fashion students from Kingston College showcased their work with a catwalk show in the grounds of All Saints Church on Tuesday, June 2. The garments displayed by 15 students were all made out of recycled materials based on natural structures. A first year national diploma music student provided music for the show.

Student is catwalk hit

A Kingston University student has already caught the eye of Italian clothing brand Max Mara, despite the fact she is yet to finish her fashion degree.

Emma Glynn, 22, has been selected to work on Max Mara's range this summer and on Sunday showcased her collections at Graduate Fashion Week.

Her collection is based around the idea of clothes being used as an art form.

She said: "It's every young designer's dream to see their clothes on the catwalk and it'll be even more special having my mum and dad in the audience."

She first caught the eye of Max Mara bosses when she submitted a portfolio into the label's student design competition and was one of 10 finalists offered an interview.

Third year Kingston University students will be showing their new collection at Earl's Court this Sunday.

Defunct care group defiant over meeting

by DAVID LINDSELL

d.lindsell@london.newsquest.co.uk

The strange saga of Kingston's patient and social care watchdog took another unexpected twist, after the supposedly disbanded steering group said it would hold an annual general meeting.

K-Link's independent steering group members were "sacked" by letter in January, after months of stalemate with Kingston Citizens Advice Bureau (KCAB), the organisation which holds the purse strings. KCAB then set up another watchdog called Kingston Link.

K-Link members sent a letter of complaint on Friday to Bruce McDonald, chief executive of Kingston Council, which oversees the contract and has sided with KCAB in the dispute, alleging breach of contract and maladministration.

Sandra Berry, chairman of the voluntary steering group, said: "What we have realised over the past few weeks is the stitch-up that has taken place."

"I'm not saying it was a deliberate stitch up but the tender documents were changed by Kingston Council between the draft being approved by us and the tender process, and changed in a severe way in that they removed the independence of the Link."

The steering group will hold its AGM on Monday, June 29, at 2pm in the United Reformed Church, Eden Street, Kingston, and is expected to re-elect itself for the next year. The Kingston Citizen Advice Bureau-backed Kingston Link will hold its own AGM on July 9.

Malcolm Alexander, chairman of the London Patients' Forum, said the steering group had been let down and should seek a judicial review of the contract. He said: "It's very disturbing. Kingston is the only borough in the country not supported by a Link. Patients have a right to expect their services will be properly and effectively monitored by the Link."

K-Link was launched in July 2008 with the backing of both Kingston's MPs, Edward Davey and Susan Kramer, and an annual budget of £102,000.

Book club opens to improve student borrowing

A new book box scheme is helping Kingston College students with their literacy lessons.

The college's Learning Resource Centre developed the idea and students have named it the Book Club.

Books suitable for those with learning disabilities are selected every half term in a bid to generate an interest in reading.

Early feedback suggests books with CDs are popular, so more have been ordered for the next batch.

Class teacher Marilyn Ruff is also looking into different ways of providing literacy support to the students such as encouraging them to read plays and write book reviews.

Jessica Warner, senior information adviser, said: "[It] has gone down tremendously well with the students, many of whom have never borrowed books before, and they are both excited and keen to get reading."

Student turns to the web to raise £4k fees

by LOUISE ROBERTSON

lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

A skint student is raking it in after developing a website to help him pay for his university tuition fees.

At 23, business-minded Spyros Pyrgiotis was the youngest person accepted on to his MBA course at Kingston University, but with no job and multiple loan refusals, it was looking doubtful he would raise the £17,000 fee.

Desperate that he would not find the money before he started his course at Kingston University in September, Mr Pyrgiotis turned to the internet for a way to raise cash.

After researching the business market and assessing what was already out there, he formed the Text Page website, which attracts advertisers at rock bottom prices.

He said: "It's a very basic idea, but it's a very low investment for businesses.

"The hardest part was starting it off and convincing people it was a good idea and was going to work." Despite his struggle, he had 20,000 hits in February – the website's first month.

The website has now attracted between 60,000 and 80,000 hits, raising £4,000.

Mr Pyrgiotis said: "That's a quarter of my university fees already I'm so happy with it.

"I don't have any support from

Clever: Business student Spyros Pyrgiotis

my parents, I support myself.

"It's so hard to follow your dreams in this country. I wouldn't be able to go if I didn't raise this money.

"There's no other way I could have got that money, it's a massive amount."

He claims it is the only website on the internet which consists of 100 per cent text and each character can be bought for just £1.50.

Its Facebook page has gathered 1,249 friends and there is so much interest, even Kingston University has approached him to advertise.

See the website for yourself at thetextpage.com.

Abnormally Funny People, a group of disabled comedians, will have audiences in stitches in Kingston tomorrow. They are known as stand-ups, but some of them sit down and some of them stand on chairs. DAVID LINDSELL finds out what's so funny from stand-up Simon Minty, who has restricted growth and dwarfism

Making disabilities a laughing matter

What qualifies you as an abnormally funny person?

You have to be funny and it helps if you have some form of disability. We always say we have one token non-disabled person. We held auditions and picked the funniest people we could find.

A lot of the acts poke fun at their own disabilities. Is having a disability funny?

The one thing we say is just because you have a disability it doesn't mean you have to do jokes about disability. Those who do are not being vindictive or nasty. They are finding the ironies in having a disabilities and poking fun at themselves. We're not laughing about someone having a disability. It is more clever than that.

How do audiences react to hearing jokes about disabilities?

It is mixed. The audience can be a bit hesitant to begin with because they are not sure if they are allowed to laugh. If disabled people are in the audience and they start to laugh then people know it is OK. Because it is disabled people doing the jokes it is empowering for the audience.

Does having a disability give you a different or unique view of the world valuable for comedy?

There are disabled people who aren't funny who have a unique view of the world. It doesn't mean you can tell jokes that other people might get. It is about a sense of humour that other people don't get. We are first and foremost about being funny.

Do people ever get offended by the jokes?

Some might be shocked and some will love someone like Liz Carr, who is more edgy. Steve Day is a very warm human being. Liam O'Carroll, who is blind, is a very well-spoken, intelligent person.

Do disabled stand-up comics get anything unique from making people laugh?

Like any comedian it is winning the love of the audience. Particularly if there is a mainstream audience, you can see by accident they are having their eyes opened up or we are teasing them about how they react and they are feeling uncomfortable but laughing at the same time. We're not really about getting a message across.

Abnormally Funny People will feature at Cabaret Ole. Also appearing are Unity and Devision, a band "with mental and physical difficulties", sign song diva Caroline Parker, survivors poetry from Razz, Muskaan Wheelchair Dancers, magical Wayne Dobson, compered by Richard West. There are two performances, at 2.30pm and 7.30pm, on Saturday, June 13, at the Performing Arts Centre, Kingston Grammar School in London Road. Tickets are £10, (£8 concessions) from Global Arts on 07960 149004 or email veronica.attah@kcil.org.uk.

Putting the brakes on climate change

Green day: Many pupils cycled to school as part of the environmental event

Rokey School pupils were the brainchild of a green day, which was brought into eco-action on Thursday, May 21.

Year 8 pupils at the Kingston-based boys' school came up with ideas on how to save energy while taking care of the environment. The older boys then put their ideas into action.

Pupils wore green for the day and opted for eco-friendly methods of transport to get to school.

Some walked, others came on public transport, some chose to cycle and others car shared.

Many parents worked together and encouraged groups of boys to ride together on their bikes.

A school spokesman said: "The boys did it all themselves. It was really good fun."

by LOUISE ROBERTSON
lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

The morning started with an assembly taken by the school council and included a song about the environment. The day continued without the lights on and no computers or interactive whiteboards were used in lessons.

All of the lessons, some of which were taught outside, had a green theme and other environmentally-friendly activities included planting a tree at the front of the school and building a sculpture made from old plastic bottles, cartons, cans and empty containers from home.

Even lunchtime was carefully planned, with the caterers contacting farmers to source local bread, fruit and vegetables.

To save energy, only cold salads were served with rolls.

Teacher Anni Green, who helped organise the day with James Attenborough, said: "We congratulate these boys on such inspirational ideas to make our school a greener place."

"We also encouraged the boys to continue supporting the environment at home by switching off lights, having an evening without television and saving water."

In the long-run the school hopes to reduce its carbon footprint and make the boys more aware of the difference they can make.

Kingston town is looking blooming marvellous, after about 200 colourful hanging baskets were put up around town.

Kingston First provided funding for the flowers, which have been put up in association with Boxgreen, which will maintain them.

Recent best team winners at Kingston Business Champions awards, Kingston First rangers, will also help maintain them by picking out any litter that ends up in the baskets.

A Kingston First spokesman said: "It lifts the whole town. Everyone we've spoken to have said they really like the hanging baskets."

"It's the sort of thing you don't really notice until they're not there."

The flowers are now in full bloom after a great mix of rain and sunshine over the past week.

Cut your speed: Sam Meredith and Taspriya Dhillon

Children from St John's Primary School in Kingston were handing out leaflets to drivers on Monday in a bid to warn them about their speed.

The message of the day was "20 is plenty but 30 is dirty" and drivers were targeted by the pupils during the morning.

The police were on hand to help reinforce the warning.

SMOG WARNING: London's Green Party MEP, Jean Lambert, has expressed concern over the health implications of the first predicted summer smogs. The Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) has warned the hot weather was likely to result in the first summer smog of the year. Mrs Lambert said: "While the warning from Defra alerts us to smogs in rural areas, we must remember that air pollution in London is already at dangerously high levels. Smog should be a thing of the past: I hope Defra's warning proves stark enough for the Government to take decisive action on this issue at last."

Boris lands himself in deep water

Boris Johnson made a splash when he fell in a river while he helped a clear-up on Thursday, June 4, to celebrate volunteering.

He was joined by residents in Lewisham to help remove litter and Himalayan balsam, an invasive plant that prevents native species thriving in the wild.

The Mayor said: "By giving your time, whether a one-off few hours or a regular commitment, we can both help to make the capital a more civilised, pleasant place and reap the rewards of putting something back into the communities in which we live.

"I want to give a great big pat on the back to the unsung army of people who are already volunteering in London, and urge more people to have a go."

Kingston University's first "Balsam Bash" was held on May 2 on the Hogsmill.

Interview lesson for TV's apprentices

Last week, three of Sir Alan's five would-be apprentices were given the stern index finger and the much feared two words "You're fired" after having their interview skills and CVs picked apart. Susan Yallop, a Director of recruitment specialist Adecco Group UK & Ireland, offers the following advice on how job-seekers can learn from the mistakes made by each of this year's Apprentice semi-finalists:

Lorraine – don't lie on your CV

It sounds simple and very basic but people continue to bend the truth and exaggerate when composing CVs. It's now easier than ever for potential employers to double-check the validity of the claims on your CV – especially basic details such as dates and length of service. Lying on a CV gives a poor impression and can raise doubts with potential employers; what's more if you do secure the job you might then find that employers have a higher expectation of your abilities than you may be able to deliver. James – tailor your CV and use appropriate language Take the time to customise your CV to the job you're applying for to showcase your most relevant skills, and steer clear of too much industry jargon. James's informal language also let him down. While it's great to show character and stand out from the competition where possible, a CV is a professional document and should be written in a formal style.

Kate – show personality

Kate's interview technique was great in some respects; she was calm, clear, composed and calculated with her responses. However, she struggled to display much of her own personality leading interviewers to feel she lacked character. Employers are always on the lookout for someone who can add value to their business, but if an interviewer is unable to get anything more than formulaic answers it immediately makes you a less attractive candidate. Avoid being robotic; when asked personal questions.

Yasmina – do your homework

Yasmina quoted financial newspapers in her application but was unable to question them in any depth when questioned. While many employers might not research the validity of every point on your CV, you should always be prepared for the possibility that they will.

Debra – choose references wisely

While you cannot necessarily expect every former colleague to speak glowingly of you, minimise the risk of negative feedback to potential employers by choosing referees who will be honest and fair but definitely positive. However, much of what colleagues are willing to say about you will depend on the impression you make on them. Your employment depends on how you function within your existing teams.

Café sees stars after cleaning up its act

by LOUISE ROBERTSON

lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

Café owners have turned a corner and upped their council hygiene score, just a year after receiving a zero rating.

Kingston Council gave A3 Café in Malden Way a zero, under the national Scores on the Doors scheme 12 months ago. It has just been awarded a four-star rating after working to improve standards.

Ted Forsyth, Kingston Council's head of environmental health and trading standards, said: "Unfortunately not all premises are as forward thinking as the A3 café."

"I'm determined to press ahead with increasing the standard of food safety across all food businesses in Kingston."

"Sadly there are still businesses failing to listen to what we have been saying about raising standards in recent years and remain poorly rated."

"Those premises that do not meet the minimum standards can expect firm enforcement action in future."

Owner Rosemary Vance, although pleased with the improvement, said the morning they were rated zero was particularly busy and a bit of a "mad rush".

She said: "We keep up with the cleaning as we go along."

"I don't like dirt and I'm forever cleaning. We've been going as a café for 11 years and we've never had any problems."

Friends' tearful tribute

by KERRY GROVE

kgrove@london.newsquest.co.uk

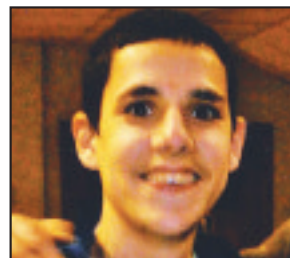

Friends and family of a devoted football fan who died aged 20 have paid tribute to his generous spirit, after he donated organs to save the lives of three women.

Michael Hills died on May 14, after suffering a blood clot to the brain at Harefield Hospital, near Uxbridge.

His generosity was highlighted even further when it was revealed he was taken off the donor list for a new heart weeks before his death.

The former Richard Challoner School pupil, who lived in Surbiton, was laid to rest at Our Lady Immaculate Church, Tolworth, last week.

His tearful mother Nina Hills said: "He was going to get the organs but then he ended up giving

Sadly missed: Michael Hills

the organs."

The family is due to meet doctors in the coming weeks to find out why Michael had been dropped from the transplant list after being told he was next in line.

They discovered only days before his death he had been off the list for eight weeks and claimed the consultants and nurses had no idea why. They also want to know why an emergency operation on his brain, which may have saved his life, despite the risks, was not carried out.

Michael, who had muscular dystrophy, spent many years in and out of hospital with heart conditions.

Michael's pancreas has been given to a 28-year-old mother; his kidney to a woman with a 17-year-old daughter and his liver to a 31-year-old woman. Mrs Hills said: "At least part of my son is living."

A spokesman from Harefield Hospital said: "We would like to extend our sincere sympathies to the Hills family following the very sad loss of their son."

Christian charity seeks cash to breathe easy

by LOUISE ROBERTSON

lrobertson@london.newsquest.co.uk

The vital work of Oxygen, a Christian youth charity in Kingston, is stretched to the limit due to the recession.

Oxygen, which runs about 18 projects a week with more than 300 young people, aims to give young people outside the church the opportunity to have some fun and find religion.

It launched in 2001 and now counts Sanso, a Korean homework club, after-school club RM1 and ID, made up of self-esteem workshops, among its successful programmes. In addition, Oxygen also oversees the work of Street Pastors Kingston and Sacred Space Kingston.

Much of the charity's work is carried out by its Mind the Gap team, which is made up of young people who want to take time out to learn about themselves and God.

According to an appeal written by Oxygen's office manager, Sarah Parker, in the New Malden Methodist Church's newsletter, the charity was in danger of ending the financial year £10,000 of debt, but managed to claw back some cash to break even.

She writes: "For a relatively new charity with no reserves and no financial fall-back this would be ter-

Director Richard James admitted the recession has hit the charity hard, with donations dropping significantly since January.

Near Hook Interchange | A3
Major maintenance work

Monday 15 June to autumn 2009

Maintenance work to lay a new road surface including drainage improvements, and replace lighting and safety barriers in the central reserve, starts on Monday 15 June, on a stretch of the A3 between Clayton Bridge and the TfL boundary, near Esher.

The work is expected to be completed in the autumn.

The work will be carried out 24 hours a day, with two narrow lanes in each direction at peak times.

From time to time, some lanes will be closed overnight between 10pm and 7am, when traffic volumes are lighter, when one lane will operate in each direction.

In addition, there will be a number of overnight road closures to complete the carriageway resurfacing. These will affect the A3 as well as the A244 at Esher Common and the A309 and A243 junctions at Hook.

Fully signposted diversions will be in place and, for the duration of the work, a temporary 40mph speed limit.

We apologise for any inconvenience this essential maintenance work may cause.

Graduation is a family event, not a cash cow

I refer to your report on students' Rose petition.

The borough's tax-payers were not consulted when this council poured millions of pounds of their money into propping up the Rose Theatre.

It now appears Kingston University also did not consult its fee-paying students before handing over £300,000 when it struck a deal with the Rose to hold the university graduation ceremonies at the theatre.

Surely, if there had been a proper consultation with all concerned, it would have shown that, because of lack of capacity, it would be plainly obvious the Rose would not be a suitable alternative to the Royal Festival Hall.

Graduation is not only an achievement after years of hard work, but also one of the most important days of a student's life, at which their whole family should be allowed to be present and take part.

Councillor Derek Osbourne seems to think the most important reason for holding a graduation ceremony at the Rose is to enable businesses to make a good profit out of it.

A graduation ceremony is a family event, not a profit-making exercise. Students, should not have to hold a lottery to decide which family members, due to lack of space, will not be allowed to attend, because of a bureaucratic decision.

MP funding letter error

The Conservative parliamentary candidate's recent letter about how Edward Davey funds his campaigns for local people is totally wrong.

Funds for his political campaigns are raised through the volunteering efforts of local Liberal Democrats.

Indeed, many local people donate to Edward's work because he is widely recognised as an outstanding MP – both in his work in the constituency and his contribution to the national debate.

DAVID WALTER

Kingston

One in one out: Early opening and closing times at Villiers Road recycling centre are causing concern to residents

Don't throw out our concerns about the tip Coun Osbourne

Councillor Derek Osbourne may be content to rest on his laurels over the success of the recycling scheme, but his complacent response to the concerns of your previous correspondents should not go unchallenged.

While I would be the first to acknowledge the revised door-to-door recycling scheme has worked better than I expected, the same cannot be said for the operation of the Villiers Road site ("the tip"), which has degenerated from adequate, under the previous management, to actually user-hostile.

As I write, on mid-Sunday afternoon, with six hours of daylight left, it is already too late to do any gardening because if I don't get the refuse in the car and join the queue by 3.15pm I will get turned away, as the gates are closed at a ludicrously early 4pm.

Come the autumn, when large quantities of garden refuse are generated in the form of fallen leaves, the council responds by moving closing time to a totally-useless 1pm.

Why not close (and open) later? Surely no one needs to go to the tip at 9am on a Sunday – opening hours of 11am to 6pm would be much more user-friendly.

I don't know where the council thinks the people they turn away from the tip every Sunday are going to take their refuse next, but there will be some who, having tried to do the responsible thing and been rebuffed, may resort to rather less environmentally sound solutions.

Coming back the next morning may not be possible for some, and in any case, in my experience, leaving sacks of garden refuse in a car overnight – or in the late afternoon of a hot summer's day – is a very bad idea. The smell of rotting vegetation takes a long time to remove from a car.

There was a time when we could use Richmond's Townmead Road tip, with its more user-friendly hours, but in a silly game of "tit-for-tat", all the local councils are now turning away non-residents, resulting in more miles travelled and a poorer overall service to the public. What next?

TIM LIDBETTER
Kingston

Mr Davey has been in Westminster too long

I would like to clear up some confusion over itemised expenses.

Last week, one of Edward Davey's supporters wrote to this paper claiming he had published itemised expenses. This is not true.

An example of itemised expenses: Monthly Travelcard from Surbiton to Waterloo £182.80, business cards £57.50, toner for office printer £68.59.

Example of what Edward Davey has published so far (quarterly figures): Travel £742.40, staff £23,771.32, equipment £585.90.

In my job in healthcare I often travel and submit itemised expenses to my employer for the cost of this. I travel by the best value method and set out item by item what I have spent.

If Edward Davey believes he has itemised his expenses it only shows he has been in Westminster too long.

How much is wasted by there being two Links?

It seems to me the main virtue of K-Link is its independence.

If it is to be usurped by KCAB, which can appoint its own steering group, with no regard to the patients' interests, then I do not see how it can claim to serve any useful purpose.

I feel it is patients who must be given the right to have a say in the delivery of the health services they need and not for Kingston Council to determine what we should have.

I also question how much public money is being wasted by this ridiculous scenario whereby there seem to be two Links in Kingston.

I shall look forward to seeing the annual report and accounts when these are published so we can see how our money is being wasted.

Red tape burden bars volunteer from school outing

A devoted mother was prevented from volunteering on a school trip this week because of severe delays in processing criminal record checks.

What would be the consequences of not bothering to wait for CRB checks? It doesn't prevent vulnerable people being abused. Every criminal has to have committed a first offence and neither the CRB system nor any other kind of personal screening can prevent would-be abusers from committing such a first offence. The only "real" way to reduce the risk of abuse is to ensure the responsibility for the welfare of a child or vulnerable person is never concentrated too heavily in the hands of one person, but is instead spread over at least three or four people.

Fred1, Surbiton

I can sympathise with Sue. My daughter has been offered work in the NHS and has waited almost 2 months and still no CRB clearance or start date for work, despite the fact she has had 6 others done already this year. There must be a way to get an instant response, especially when they have applied for so many in the recent past?

D-Day veteran describes monumental war effort

A WWII veteran from Southfields is going back to Normandy to mark the 65th anniversary of the D-Day landings this weekend.

And I bet you never thought our country would have ended up like some third world South American country – where crime is rife and life is cheap!

scoffer, Beckenham

Thanks to Cpl Lewer and all the others. I hope those of today value the sacrifices made yesterday.

A taste of KOREA

Nanta has proved a hit at theatres across the world since it was first performed in Seoul more than 10 years ago – and now the high-energy mix of Korean music and dance, slapstick comedy and cooking is coming to the Rose Theatre.

Running from June 18-27, Nanta, or 'Cookin'', is a non-verbal performance set in a kitchen.

The story goes that three chefs are enjoying a quiet day when their grumpy manager bursts in and orders them to prepare a wedding banquet by the evening. He also wants them to teach his nephew how to cook.

This premise is the cue for fast-chopping action that sends vegetables and bodies flying as the performers pull off a range of acrobatic stunts.

THEATRE: Nanta, Rose Theatre

Will Gore

Nanta has been brought to the Rose as part of New Malden's Cultural Waves festival, organised by Theatre 4 All, and director Bona Shin is delighted the show will be on in the Royal Borough.

"There are four theatres in Korea showing Nanta at the moment," she says.

"We are thrilled to have it in Kingston because it would normally be on in a big theatre in central London. It will be a good chance for the Korean community to see a Korean production near to where they live.

"Up until now, the Korean community have not really been to the Rose.

"We all hope this will be the start for the community going to the theatre. Once you enter the world of theatre you will stay there – the Rose is a stylish, unique venue."

As well as appealing to the Korean community, the aim of the festival is to introduce a wider audience to Korean traditions, and Shin is confident Nanta is the perfect show for achieving this.

"It is full of music, comedy and acrobatics – it will appeal to all ages, there are no limitations," she says.

"When you are cooking, you are surrounded by these different rhythms and sounds

– it is just amazing.

"The rhythms of the show are derived from Korean folk music and they are created with traditional Korean drums.

"It is good to have the Korean traditions in Nanta but we wanted to bring something to the Rose that everyone could enjoy.

"We didn't want to make it too difficult for those who are not used to Korean performance, we wanted to have something that you and your neighbour could go to and understand together."

Nanta, Rose Theatre, Kingston, June 18-27, 7.30pm (Saturday matinées 2.30pm), £12-£16, visit rosetheatrekingston.org

Cultural Waves Highlights

● June 16-27 – ART EXHIBITION Year seven pupils from Tiffins Boys' School display large scale, site-specific mosaics at the Rose Theatre.

Get ready to Rumble

The Rumble Strips are celebrating the release of their second album, Welcome To The Walk Alone, with a gig at New Slang.

The album was produced by current musical trendsetter Mark Ronson, who was keen to work with the band after lead singer Charlie Waller sang Amy Winehouse's Back To Black with him at the BBC Electric Proms in 2007 and is the follow-up to the band's 2007 debut album, Girls And Weather.

Tonight's New Slang gig

will feature tracks from the new record, as well as some old live favourites, including Girls And Boys In Love.

Support comes from The Voluntary Butler Scheme. The show starts at 9pm and after the bands there will be the usual New Slang DJs playing the best indie floor-fillers until 2am – but don't forget to bring your ID!

Lemuria
@ Fighting Cocks

Buffalo thrill: Alexander
Kerns, Jason Draper,
Sheena Ozzella

Sound and influences

All three of us
come from different musical backgrounds that have influenced us a lot. We are mainly influenced by 90s indie rock.
Aspects of Jawbox, Sebadoh, Super-chunk and the Lemonheads have made their way into our songs.

When did it all start?

The band started towards the end of summer 2004.
They had a different bass player, who was on the first demo and who played a handful of shows. I joined in March of that year, right before we recorded the first seven-inch and went on our first tour.

Any groupies?

We have made a lot of friends all over the States and in Europe. I wouldn't call them groupies but there are some amazing people out there who we have been lucky enough to meet.

What do you have planned for your British tour?

We leave in about a week.
We will be there for two weeks and we all insanely excited. We hope to just hang out a lot and see some cool stuff over there. I'm a real nerd for some British bands, so I plan on geeking out and going to see some landmarks from photos and such of the bands. Salford Lads Club here we come!

Best moment

For me it was the first time
there were people singing

AMERICAN DREAMS

NEXT SUNDAY (June 21), American rockers Lemuria finally make it to Kingston for a show at the Fighting
Cocks. The band's bassist, Jason Draper, spoke to The Noise ahead of their trip across the Atlantic.

along to our songs who weren't our friends in Buffalo. It was surreal. I knew how lucky we were to be able to travel the country while playing music but that just put everything on a new level.

Any releases?

We have a split seven-inch with Off With Their Heads coming out as part of the Suburban Homes, Under The Influence series. We cover the Pixies' Alec Eiffel for that. In July, we are going back to the studio to record a new seven-inch that will be out on Hex Records. If things go well, with time, we may record another EP at that time as well.

Song you wish you had written

I wish we had written anything on Born To Run. Alex wishes he had written a lot of Fleetwood Mac songs and Sheena wishes she had written the whole Leather-face back catalogue.

What's the band's dream?
Our dream is just to keep doing what we are doing - traveling the world, playing music, and having people care about us. There's not much more we could ask for.

Fantasy festival line-up

Bruce Springsteen, Fleet-
wood Mac, Tom Petty, REM, Dinosaur Jr, Leatherface, Superchunk, Sebadoh, and the Lemonheads.

Nightmare line-up

All of our past bands having reunion shows. That would be a nightmare for everyone in attendance.

Films The week's releases

Looking For Eric (15): British director Ken Loach shot his latest bitter-sweet slice of life on location in Manchester and scores possibly his most mainstream, feel-good hit to date – except perhaps in Liverpool. With a pivotal dramatic role for both Manchester United FC and its fondly remembered Gallic superstar Eric Cantona, it could stick in the craw of the Anfield faithful. For everyone else, this heartfelt coming-of-middle-age story finds emotional truth and earthy humour in the simple story of a single father struggling to raise two stepsons. ****

The Last House On The Left (18): A remake of Wes Craven's controversial 1972 rape-revenge thriller, this gruesome offering from director

Dennis Iliadis trails wearily in the footsteps of updated versions of The Texas Chainsaw Massacre, Halloween and Friday The 13th. It is a point-less revisit to a landmark in modern cinema, spruced up with impressive make-up and special effects as two parents declare war on the thugs who brutalised their daughter. ***

Terminator Salvation (12A): Man battles the machines once again in an all-guns-blazing reboot of the Terminator series, which sows the seeds of a new trilogy charting John Connor's rise to leader of the Resistance in the aftermath of Judgement Day. Christian Bale plays humankind's saviour but it is Sam Worthington, who powerfully and touchingly plays half-man, half-Terminator Markus Wright, who steals every scene. ****

Last Chance Harvey (12A): Love blossoms when two lonely people least expect it in writer-director Joel Hopkins' gently paced and charming romance, set in London. Oscar winners Dustin Hoffman and Emma Thompson add polish to very familiar material – you may need a very sweet tooth to swallow some of the saccharine sentiment, but their screen chemistry simmers. ***

Drag Me To Hell (15): After record-breaking box-office success with Spider-Man and its sequels, director Sam Raimi returns to horror – the genre which made his name – with this tongue-in-cheek battle for a young woman's soul. Starring Alison Lohman, it recalls his seminal Evil Dead series with its queasy conflation of gore and dark humour. In an age when horror films have become an exercise in sadism, Drag Me To Hell is a welcome throwback to more playful times. ****

Tides, an exhibition of new seascape paintings by Fountain Gallery member artist Beverley Waller, has opened at the gallery in Hampton Court. The richly coloured paintings reflect changing weather conditions and captures glimpses of the horizon, sea and shore, and will be on display at the Fountain Gallery at June 21. Based in south-west London, Waller's work is inspired by her love of the Highlands of Scotland. This solo exhibition follows on from successful shows in galleries in Hampton Wick and Kew. Tides, Fountain Gallery, 26 Bridge Road, Hampton Court, until Sunday, June 21, 11.30am to 5.30pm daily (Mondays closed), call 020 8941 586 or visit fountaingallery.co.uk

CONCERTS: Kingston Chamber Orchestra, All Saints' Church

Will Gore

On Saturday, the Kingston Chamber Orchestra performs its latest concert, featuring work by Haydn, Prokofiev and Schubert, at All Saints' Church.

Solo violinist Fenella Humphreys will be performing Prokofiev's passionate Second Concerto. Humphreys was a winner of the Richmond Young Musician of the Year award in the 90s and recently starred as the Fiddler in Twickenham Operatic Society's production of Fiddler On The Roof.

Marking the 200th anniversary of Haydn's death, the orchestra will be performing his lively Symphony No96 and the concert's finale will be a rare performance of Schubert's Symphony No6 in C, sometimes known as the Little C Major to distinguish it from his other C major symphony, The Great C Major.

Expect good conduct

At the age of just 24 Graham Ross, the musical director of Kingston Choral Society, is already an accomplished conductor and composer.

He spoke to Will Gore about the society's upcoming concert, receiving rave reviews for his latest CD, and taking opera to the Middle East.

Will Gore: You joined KCS as musical director last November. Are you enjoying the experience?

Graham Ross: Very much so. The joy of being a conductor is that you get an awful lot of repertoire to tackle and KCS give me a fairly blank canvas for programming the concerts, which is great.

WG: What do you have planned for the June 20 concert?

GR: It will be my first orchestral KCS concert so it gives me the chance to get to grips with some great choral work. It is the 200th anniversary of Haydn's anniversary this year, so for the concert on June 20 we are doing his Nelson Mass. We are also doing the Faure Requiem but in its original version, which Faure is said to have preferred. It is an intimate scoring without violins. It is not done in that way very often, so it is a chance to look at a familiar piece in a new light.

WG: How did you get into classical music?

GR: I had a musical upbringing and covered lots of repertoire, both sacred and secular, as a young singer. I then began to compose at the piano and organ. After taking lessons at the Royal College of Music (RCM), I went to Cambridge and studied music before going back to the RCM to do a postgraduate course in orchestral conducting. I was lucky because Cambridge was a fertile ground for trying stuff out. There was an array of instrumentalists and singers at my disposal.

CONCERTS: Graham Ross, All Saints' Parish Church

WG: Do you see yourself primarily as a composer or a conductor?

GR: Lots of people say: "Which one are you going to focus on?" My answer is always that it is very much fifty-fifty. At the moment, there is lots going on on both fronts and they feed into each other.

WG: You are about to head to the Middle East with choirs from London. How did the trip come about?

GR: We went to the West Bank in 2007 for the Palestine Mozart Festival, which was set up by two friends of mine who run the Choir of London. We are going back to do a number of performances of La Boheme that I'm assisting on. Last time we were there we did a gala performance of the Mozart Requiem with various choirs and schools and one entire choir missed the performance because they couldn't get through a check-point. That incident helped keep us aware of the meaning of the trip and anything you can do to help as outsiders trying to unite a troubled area is a bonus.

WG: Your CD, in which you conduct the Dmitri Ensemble performing James MacMillan's Seven Last Words From The Cross, recently received five-star reviews. You must be delighted?

GR: We have had some really nice feedback and have been in the classical charts for three weeks. It is a great piece but not well known. I would say this but I urge people to buy it so they can hear the music for themselves.

Kingston Choral Society Concert: Fauré's Requiem, Elgar's Serenade For Strings, and Haydn's Nelson Mass, All Saints' Parish Church, Market Place, Kingston, June 20, 7.30pm, £14/£12/£5, available from Hands Music, The Griffin Centre. or call 020 8390 5689 or visit kingstonchoralsociety.co.uk

SUZUKI'S GRAND VITARA

The good value, family-friendly 4x4

You would think from all the doom-laden talk by industry observers that the conventional 4x4 is dead. Not so, if the current crop of models is anything to go by.

It's true that the really expensive stuff has had to take a drop in demand on the chin, but if you want a regular, competent, family-friendly 4x4 there's still a lot to choose from – and it doesn't have to come with a green oval badge.

One such car is Suzuki's Grand Vitara. In recent years its appeal has been broadened; no longer a fringe participant, Suzuki added some much-needed polish to its Grand Vitara. The end result was a car that no longer required a lengthy set of conditions alongside any tentative recommendation.

The same is true of today's model, although you might not immediately notice the car's newly revised status. To say that the exterior changes are subtle is something of an understatement. That appears to be the way Suzuki likes it, though. Let the car's performance do all the talking and all that. There's been an equally modest upgrade inside the Vitara's commodious cabin. The car's central console has been changed for the better, and the quality of the switchgear is a noticeable improvement. Granted, this isn't stuff that's going to get people clamouring to get out of their Range Rovers, but the various changes should prove attractive when convincing regular people with modest budgets.

For on the road performance, it's hard to fault the current Grand Vitara. Suzuki does know a thing or two about 4x4s and the Vitara offers a level of competence that's hard to find elsewhere at this price point.

By way of marking the introduction of the revised car, the flagship model gains a new 2.4 litre petrol unit to replace the previous 2.0 litre engine.

Power is now 166bhp and torque is a decent 168lb/ft from an accessible 3,800rpm. For the average driver this should prove more than adequate for all but the most extreme of situations.

Crucially, the on-road experience is exceptionally refined. The petrol engine's hushed nature ensures a relaxed experience on long motorway journeys and the arduous stop-start commute.

Of course, with the Vitara's talents it's fair to say that the car is no pushover off the beaten track either. Grip, poise and refinement are all top notch when you're scrambling over rocks or battling with a muddy or rutted track. Only now, you can do it in a little more luxury and, with the 2.4 petrol engine, with a bit more oomph.

As an alternative to a conventional family hatch, estate or five-seat people carrier, again the Vitara scores highly. With its adjustable all-wheel drive system it can be trundling to school one minute and chugging across a soggy, gripless field the next, en route to whatever weekend activity takes your fancy. And for good measure you can do it safely while towing a trailer.

With its combination of a generous amount of standard equipment, in five-door form, a family-friendly cabin and load space plus a level of competence that easily trumps more expensive rivals, Suzuki is right to keep the 'Grand' in Grand Vitara.

IT'S ALL PLAIN SAILING FOR CREWS

Kingston Grammar School Boat Club crews took two titles at the National Schools' Regatta in Nottingham. The J16 boys quartet of Iain Mandale, Peter Wales, Dan Robinson and Matt Alcock (pictured right) added the National Schools Regatta crown to the Schools Head title they won earlier in the year to become undisputed national champions.

Dowson eyes new signings

Kingstonian boss Alan Dowson is hoping to land three new signings in the next seven days, that he hopes can give his side the edge in what he describes as the most open Ryman League Premier Division in years.

Dowson missed out on experienced former AFC Wimbledon captain Jason Goodcliffe, who joined league rivals Sutton United last week, but has vowed to boost his title-winning squad before pre-season.

The Kingsmeadow chief has already agreed terms with the majority of last season's squad - including Bobby Traynor, Carl Wilson-Denis, Max Hustwick, Jamie Beer, Simon Huckle, Luke Garrard and Tommy Williams.

"I'm looking at six or seven options at the moment and, if I get three of them, I'll be delighted," said Dowson.

"Everybody from last season has indicated they want to stay and, hopefully, there will be some new faces as well."

National duty

Surbiton's England hockey contingent face a hectic three weeks of training and matches home and abroad this month.

Four full internationals - Richard Alexander, Matt Daly, Ben Hawes and James Tindall - are in the 18-man squad at the BDO 2009 Hamburg Masters Tournament.

Surbiton's Rob Moore is not in the Hamburg party, but is in the European training squad, from which teams will be selected for Tests against Australia in Nottingham.

Meanwhile, 19-year-old Ben Tibble has flown out with the 18-strong England U21 squad to take part in the 2009 Junior World Cup in Singapore and Malaysia.

Fitness focus is key for Mel

by RICHARD ANDERSON

sports@london.newsquest.co.uk

New Malden's Mel South believes she is leaner and meaner than ever after sending close friend Katie O'Brien crashing out of the Aegon Classic in Birmingham.

The British number four has only just returned to action after a seven-week break to improve her fitness, but that hard work paid off as she won 6-4, 1-6, 7-6 in a titanic struggle with O'Brien.

The 23-year-old, who reached the last eight at Edgbaston 12 months ago, has slipped out of the top 100 in the world during her fitness focus, but is convinced she has returned a much better player.

"The training has gone really well and it definitely helped me in this match," said South.

"I've always worked hard on my fitness, just not in the right areas.

"I spent more hours in the gym than almost anyone but I wasn't seeing the improvement.

"I was tiring myself out and not recovering but, now, I'm working even harder but getting time to recover and that's helped me out.

"Towards the end of the match, I started playing really well and I'm confident that I can do well here this week.

"My first aim is to get back into the top 100 as soon as possible. There are a lot of ranking points available over this period.

"With all the training I've done, I know I can break into the top 50 in the world. I got into the top 100 not feeling very fit, so it's more of a realistic goal now."

South was due to face top seed and world number 16 Jhi Zheng in the second round yesterday.

She admitted the challenge of China's best would be easier to focus on than the clash with O'Brien.

"It was such a tough match against Katie - we are best friends and you try and be professional but it can be difficult to focus," added South.

Fighting fit: Mel South

Braced: John Hess prepares to hit out for Malden Wanderers in Saturday's winning draw against Weybridge

Deadlinepix Amy Weston SP26622

Winning draw for Wanderers

Malden Wanderers earned a winning draw in their Surrey Championship Premier Division clash at struggling Weybridge on Saturday.

Batting first, Malden got off to a slow start before a solid stand between John Hess (64) and Laurie Evans (89), along with several contributions further down the order, got them up to a respectable 219 off their 40 overs.

Two wickets in quick succession from captain Giles Puckle (2-50), removing both Weybridge danger men, took the sting out of the hosts' reply.

Tom Wightwick (3-59) then decimated the Weybridge order, as the home side fell 15 runs short as Malden picked up the winning draw.

FOOTBALL: Former Kingstonian chairman Graham Child has died after suffering a heart attack last Wednesday. There will be a celebration of his life at St John the Baptist Church in Old Malden at 12.30pm on Monday. If anyone would like to make a donation, the funeral directors are Frederick Paine, in New Malden, who can provide details of the charities chosen by Graham's wife, Bobby.

BOWLS: The Eric Hunt Cup, a mixed pairs competition played at Malden Manor Bowling Club, was won by Maggie Fleming and Micky Conrad-Banks, who beat Carole Brough and Dave Smith in the final on Saturday. Both women are relative newcomers to bowling, having started playing at the New Malden club two years ago.

ATHLETICS: Stragglers runner Roy Reeder won the inaugural Morden Hall parkrun on Saturday. Reeder clocked 17 minutes, 43 seconds to pip Alex Macaulay (UCL), who finished in 17:44. The Kingston club had four athletes competing, with Ian Callander (19:45), Vince Howley (20:11) and Joanne Muirlittle (27:02) all joining Reeder.

CRICKET: Chessington fell to a losing draw in their Surrey Championship Division Three clash at Bank of England on Saturday. Alex Yarnley made 89 not out as Chessington recorded 190-6 in 41 overs but, with a reduced run rate, Bank claimed four points after hitting 154-7 in just 33 overs.
